1. During July fresh Bulgarian troop reinforcements were placed along the entire Bulgarian-Yugoslav frontier. A large number of officers and troops moved from Oryakhovo to the Vidin-Kula sector. Units from an infantry regiment in Vidin were transferred to Belogradchik as border area reinforcements. New infantry units from the interior were dispatched to the Dragoman-Nedelishte line and strengthened by a horse-drawn artillery regiment at Breznik. The infantry regiment in Kyustendil assumed control of the Bosilgrad region running from the village of Treklyano through Busevo (sic), Tsarevo (sic), and the Osogovska Mountains.
2. Military installations are being built and reinforced by Trudovaks and compulsory labor units in the mountain regions along the Yugoslav-Bulgarian frontier to a depth of one hundred kilometers, as well as at strategic communication points.
3. In late July a commission composed of ranking officials from the Bulgarian Ministry of Defense, headed by General Peter Panchevski, inspected military forces and positions along the Yugoslav border. The commission found people in the border areas not sympathetic toward Soviet and Bulgarian policies, and noticed strong resistance to these policies despite the terrorization methods employed. To remedy this situation the commission and the Bulgarian Communist Party Central Committee sent Bulgarian Communist officials and Soviet diplomats stationed in Bulgaria to the Yugoslav border areas to increase propaganda.
